

Thanks to technology today our teens must navigate a highly sexualized culture without any apparent barriers, limits, or boundaries. This culture reinforces negative bias, conventional stereotypes, and the fashionable debasing of girls' identity in media - all of which creates a climate conducive to rampant sexual bullying. A frank and open discussion about such a highly sexualized culture that our teens are growing up in, and the impact it has on them, is much needed. In the hands of the creative, skillful and caring filmmaker Lynn Glazier, It's a Teen's World: wired for sex, lies and power trips and the accompanying educational materials are a much needed and invaluable resource for teens, their parents, educators, and the wider community. I intend to promote It's a Teen's World wherever I go.

Barbara Coloroso
Author and Educator